Excerpt: . years. So long as Constantius lived, however, Julian could not safely declare himself, and it was not therefore until 360, when he was himself proclaimed Emperor at Paris, that he was in a secure position to make a public declaration of his change of religion. 3 the relations of julian with christianity Julian had continued to make at least some outward profession of Christianity until the death of Constantius.¹ Apparently he had been an active Christian up to the time of his association with Maximus (351-2), for he is credited with helping his brother Gallus to raise a shrine to St. Mammas in Cappadocia,² and there is no reason to doubt that he was ordained to the minor office of reader in the Church. As late as 361 he celebrated the festival of the Epiphany.³ Miss Gardner has made the startling suggestion that...
