I made in May, 1865, the construction by them of a wooden flume, 1800 feet long, four feet wide and three deep, was already far advanced. It was supported on tressels of great strength at distances of three feet, with a surrounding frame-work. The object of this construction was to carry away from a higher point the waters of the stream, thus leaving its channel dry, and at the same time to afford water for washing the alluvions. Although of sufficient strength and capacity for the ordinary volume of water, this structure appeared to me when I examined it, to be unfit to resist the floods which occasionally bring rocks and uprooted trees down the channels of these ordinary quiet streams. I remarked this to my fellow-traveller at the time, and the event soon justified my fears, --for in the month of July last the dam...
