Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Journals of the Continental Congress, 1908, Vol. 10 The two subjects of greatest importance which occupied the attention of Congress in the year 1778 were finance and foreign affairs. The increasing difficulty of paying the expenses of the war with issues of paper currency, Continental and State, obliged Congress to look to other sources of revenue. The lottery had not been a success, and the receipts at the loan offices were insufficient to meet the growing demands for ready money - demands made inordinately large in appearance by the depreciation of the bills of credit. The Treasury was reorganized, requisitions made upon the States, taxation urged, and foreign loans sought. The treaties with France opened a new prospect; for they gave the States a standing in international affairs, and suggested more certain methods of obtaining money, ammunition, and joint expeditions with France against the common enemy. The want of accord among the American commissioners in Europe produced unfortunate results in France and in Congress. Silas Deane was recalled, under charges of misapplying the aids received...
